A gift card is a prepaid card that can be used by anyone who has been given it. Although a gift card usually looks like a credit card, no debt arises from its use. Gift cards have replaced old paper gift cards and are a perfect present for cases where you are not sure what to buy. A deeper definition of gift cards with the logo on the front of a large credit card, such as MasterCard, Visa, American Express or Discover, can be used in any store that accepts these cards. Some cards can be used in stores owned by the same parent company. For example, Gap Inc. owns Gap, Old Navy, Banana Republic and Athleta, so the Gap Inc. gift card is good for any of the stores it owns. Some gift cards can only be used by one dealer. Companies like Target, Amazon, Best Buy and Macy's offer cards that can only be used to purchase only their own items. Some gift card fees are charged about $5. The activation fee is paid when the gift card is purchased. Some gift cards also charge a pasyfin fee for cards that have not been used within one year. Some gift cards act as money. If they are lost or stolen, funds are in the hands of who has the card. Other cards can be registered online and can report lost or stolen. When this happens, the balance is frozen and transferred to a new card. Starbucks and Crate & Barrel are two retailers that encourage customers to register gift cards and issue new ones if they are lost or stolen. If you plan to give a gift card as a gift, also provide the recipient with a card activation receipt and a sheet of paper with the gift card number, including additional security numbers that may be on the card. The recipient can more easily change the card if it is lost or stolen. If the recipient understands that his card has disappeared, he should contact the retailer or credit card company immediately. A retailer should be able to freeze your account and issue a new card using an activation receipt or gift card number. Most store cards do not call replacement fees, but bank issued cards can. Example gift card: Special person who has been granted a gift card can use it to pay for part or all of the purchase. Some gift cards have the maximum amount you can load, but are reloadable, meaning the recipient can add funds later if he wants. Other gift cards do not serve an additional purpose when the balance is spent. Since Christmas is just ten days away, you may be feeling the pressure if you haven't crossed off all your listings yet. When I can't seem to find the perfect gift or just don't have enough time, I use gift cards. Giving someone an actual gift is definitely more thoughtful and personal, but if time doesn't allow, a gift card can always be a great alternative. If you buy a gift card for someone's favorite store, he or she will definitely be delighted. Is it hard to find gift cards for someone? My gift card picks are below and some of them even offer bonus offers! (You can now mark your list, and more time with your family this holiday season!) The bookworm: Border gift card. One handy difference between money and gift cards, though: No one is going to trade you $50 in cash for less than $50. With some clever tricks, however, you can buy gift cards significantly less than their purchasing power. All you have to do to get the best priced gift card is to buy with the right credit card in the right place: Use Gift Cards for Exchange Site Sites like Plastic Jungle and Gift Cards Granny are popular places to buy (and sell) gift cards for use. You can save as much as 35% off face value gift card (or more if you're also eBay sellers) using one of these sites. The choice of gift cards for these resellers, however, can be slim at times, and they are often sold in odd amounts, so if you are looking to save on a specific gift card amount, you may not have much luck here. Also, when you're in a hurry, it's easier to just go to the store to buy a gift card. Here's another strategy that discounts for the most popular gift cards automatically: Buy gift cards with rewards credit card for food, pharmacies, or or Delivery stores Use your rewards credit cards to save money on gift cards. If you have a credit card that gives you something like 3 to 6 percent back for purchases made in a supermarket, you can buy gift cards in the supermarket, and therefore basically, except for that 3 to 6 percent. Other places where you can buy gift cards, which can also be relevant credit card reward categories include office supplies in stores and pharmacies. If you have these cards, for example, you can get money back on the gift cards you buy from some places: American Express Blue Cash Preferred (6% back in supermarkets), Daily (3% back in the supermarket), or grandfather's Daily (5% back in supermarkets and pharmacies) card; Chase Ink (5% office supplies stores), Amex SimplyCash card and other Amex OPEN cards (5% of office goods stores). Use a Gift Card to buy a different gift Card Boarding Area describing another gift card and reward card purchase strategy: use a (discounted) gift card for one store to buy another gift card that you could actually use. For example, you could get a Toys R Us gift card (which you can get 5% cash back through uPromise) and then use that card to purchase an Amazon gift card. If you buy an OfficeMax gift card with a credit card that rewards you for shopping in office supplies stores, you can use that OfficeMax gift card to buy a different gift card. Check out the Boarding Area's full chart of gift card hacks. Buy Gift Cards with your credit card rewards program/Punkt Finally, if you have a rewarded credit card, it might be more of a point to redeem your reward for a gift card than any other type of reward (such as cash or miles) because gift card redemption is often cheaper as well as on sale from time to time. Recently, for example, Citibank credit cards had a buyout offer of $100 for an Amazon gift card for 9,000 points (saving 1,000 points or about $10), but their typical cash-back reward is $50 for 10,000 points. If you buy gift cards using a credit card or travel rewards shopping portals like Chase Ultimate Rewards or Aadvantage, you can earn miles or points for purchasing this gift card. In short, you never have to pay the full price for a gift card. Photo 401 (K) 2012 OFFICIAL RULES DO NOT NEED TO BUY TO ENTER OR WIN.
